The Research Institute MIM, Malmö Institute for Studies of Migration, Diversity and Welfare, was established on 1st January 2007 and is now in its fifth year of operation. MIM is a higher education multidisciplinary research institute based at Malmö University and serves as an integrated meeting place and research arena for migration and ethnicity researchers from a variety of disciplines. We think that it is important to describe the kind of activities that we have been involved with in our first five years of existence and what we have managed to achieve during that time with the limited resources at our disposal. From now on we plan to publish an annual report of our work each year.

The core of our work has been the outreach-based research seminars that have been arranged more or less every other week during term-time and the workshops and conferences that have taken place on a more occasional basis during the term. One conference in particular should be mentioned, namely the 15th Nordic Migration Research Conference entitled “Global Challenges - Local Responses”. This was the largest and most important conference that MIM has been responsible for. It took place in August 2010 and had five internationally renowned keynote speakers as invited participants. It was significant in the sense that Nordic Migration Research organisation became an important Nordic actor in gathering together migration and ethnicity researchers.

A somewhat different, but nevertheless highly esteemed part of our work has been the themed seminars representing a variety of perspectives and the public debates with invited panellists and politicians. Collaborative events organised jointly with the City of Malmö and associations and clubs in Malmö, with invited international researchers, have also been a successful feature of our work.
As can be seen from this report, our research seminars and workshops have a broad span and reflect the research institute’s thematic emphases of migration and politics, migration and welfare and migration and diversity. The international contribution in the form of the participation of researchers from different parts of the world has been strong and the result of a deliberate strategy on the part of the institute. The opportunity to invite expert and internationally recognised migration researchers was made possible by the gift from the City of Malmö in the form of a Guest Professorship in Memory of Willy Brandt. Together with this, a research fellow and a postgraduate post have also been an integrated part of MIM’s activities from its inception.

Senior and younger postdoc researchers as well as doctoral students in the discipline have been stimulated to hold seminars. In addition, experts from other higher education institutions have been invited to hold seminars. As a research institute for diversity we have been keen to attract researchers with different scientific views and perspectives to our seminars. Similarly, we have not been afraid of addressing controversial and burning issues at our seminars and workshops. Another central part of our work in this initial period has been a prioritised investment in no less than three different publication series: Willy Brandt Series of Working Papers, Current Themes in IMER Research and MIM Working Papers Series. The publication in book form of the Willy Brandt Conference Proceedings and a number of other books can also be added to the list.

Professor Björn Fryklund
MIM Director
Malmö, 1st December 2011
Migration and its effects in different areas become increasingly central to a debate that spans local, regional and international levels and involves a number of institutions and networks connecting researchers, policymakers and practitioners. Migrant incorporation processes occur at the local level, even though the reasons for and decisions about it take place at national and international levels and can be strongly influenced by migrants’ transnational practices. Malmö University recognised the need for pursuing socially relevant research based on internationally situated comparisons.

In January 2007 Malmö Institute for Studies of Migration, Diversity and Welfare (MIM) was established as a joint research institute in order to build on the perspectives of migration and ethnicity profiled in many of Malmö University’s courses and programmes. Research is done first and foremost in collaboration with other researchers, although partners like public authorities and agencies, institutions, organisations and professionals responsible for managing and carrying out migration and integration policies are also included and involved.

Investment in MIM, together with the placement of the Guest Professorship in International Migration and Ethnic Relations in Memory of Willy Brandt at MIM, has included incentives aimed at acquiring a prominent international position in the development of research on migration, diversity and welfare. MIM aims to contribute to and develop a migration perspective in Swedish social sciences. It has an important role to play in developing research on migration, diversity and welfare beyond consultancy-based normative analyses.
In MIM’s research strategies and programme documents three themes have been highlighted as especially relevant, all of which include local, transnational and global aspects: migration and politics, migration and diversity and migration and welfare.

Different research programmes and projects are coordinated and developed under each theme. An emphasis on the Öresund and Scania Region, with a particular focus on Malmö when relevant, serves as a useful profile for MIM and helps to maintain a comparative perspective in an international context, with a developed sensitivity for the transnational aspects of local effects of migration.

The focus is on contemporary societal processes of inclusion and exclusion concerning politics, policies, places, institutions and people’s everyday lives. Subject fields thus include:

- democracy, citizenship, nationalism, populism and xenophobia
- ethnic diversity in regions, cities and organisations
- institutions and professions in school, leisure, sport and health
- transnational practices at institutional and grassroots levels

As documented in this report, research at MIM integrates a wide spectrum of subject fields in a fruitful way, where synergy effects are developed, networks expanded and channels are created that facilitate research and the dissemination of research results nationally, internationally and beyond the traditional academic sphere.

The following pages document the academic work done at MIM in the course of the first four years of its existence. As the seminars involved many colleagues from different places of work, the list of academic achievements only includes the work of those colleagues who are or have been formally connected with MIM.

One of MIM’s aims has also been to contribute to the education of younger researchers in MIM’s field of research by ensuring that doctoral candidates affiliated to MIM collaborate with Guest Professors and other senior researchers in a variety of research seminars, workshops and conferences. This is why the work of several PhD candidates placed at the Department of IMER, who shared MIM’s offices and contributed to its vivid seminar culture, is also included in this report.
MIM’s research efforts attempt to enhance Malmö University’s opportunities to influence local and regional social development. MIM proved to be an efficient means for Malmö University to increase and improve its contacts with policymakers and practitioners in the areas of migration and integration.

Most importantly, international contacts with researchers have resulted in a number of scientific publications in the form of books and articles in peer-reviewed journals. MIM has also organised several successful conferences. The one that involved most participants was the 15th Nordic Migration Research Conference “Global Challenges - Local Responses”.

 Archived information and details about current events at MIM can be found at http://www.mah.se/mim.

GUEST PROFESSORSHIP IN MEMORY OF WILLY BRANDT

The Guest Professorship in International Migration and Ethnic Relations (IMER) in Memory of Willy Brandt is a gift to Malmö University financed by the City of Malmö and sponsored by MKB Fastighets AB. It was donated to The School of IMER on the occasion of the inauguration of Malmö University on 31 August 1998, and signed by Ilmar Reepalu, Chairman of the Municipal Executive Board. Between 1998 and 2007 the Guest Professorship in Memory of Willy Brandt was placed at the School of IMER and since 2007 has been housed at MIM.

In order to emphasise the importance and status of the scientific investment in a Guest Professorship and its associated posts, the City of Malmö obtained the family’s permission to name the Guest Professorship after the former Chancellor of West Germany, Willy Brandt. The motives for calling it the Guest Professorship in Memory of Willy Brandt are as follows:

- Willy Brandt was forced to leave his native country when the Nazis assumed power and live in Norway until the outbreak of war. He subsequently lived in Sweden as a refugee during the war. Throughout his life he maintained strong ties with Scandinavia.

- In his political actions Willy Brandt was an active and forceful opponent of all forms of racism.

- Willy Brandt was a leading figure in the struggle for human rights. He also took important initiatives to open up a dialogue between East and West.
The purpose of the Guest Professorship has been to strengthen research at Malmö University in the field of IMER. The City of Malmö sought, via the Guest Professorship, to reinforce contacts with international experts in order to ensure that they would become an integral part of research and teaching in the field of IMER. To this end, an internationally oriented Guest Professorship creates a constant exchange of knowledge and ideas and enhances Malmö University’s academic strength clustered at MIM.

The gift from the City of Malmö also includes a Research Fellow (forskarassistent) and a postgraduate or doctoral student (doktorand) post. In 2007-2010, Pieter Bevelander was the Willy Brandt Research Fellow and Brigitte Suter was the Willy Brandt doctoral student. During her leave of absence, her administrative duties were carried out by Sayaka Osanami Törngren.

Professor Bo Stråth (University of Helsinki) evaluated the Guest Professorship in 2010. His evaluation report is available at www.mah.se/mim (Bo Stråth, Migrationsforskning i Malmö: Tio års landvinningar och framtida möjligheter. En utvärdering av gästprofessuren till Willy Brandts minne vid Malmö högskola, 2010).

From 2007 to 2011, the Willy Brandt Guest Professor position was held by the following people: David Ingleby (The Netherlands), Cas Mudde (Belgium), Yasemin Soysal (UK), Carlo Ruzza (Italy/UK), Peggy Levitt (USA), Daniel Hiebert (Canada), Raymond Taras (USA) and Ayhan Kaya (Turkey).

Abridged versions of their CVs are included in the following pages. Details of their seminars at MIM, public lectures and conference participation can be found in the respective sections of MIM’s activities.
David Ingleby graduated in Psychology from Cambridge University in 1965. He subsequently worked as a researcher for the Medical Research Council (Applied Psychology Research Unit and Unit on Environmental Factors in Mental & Physical Illness) and taught at Cambridge University (Social and Political Sciences). In 1982 he emigrated to the Netherlands and was appointed Professor of Developmental Psychology at Utrecht University in 1984. From 1985-1988 he was chairman of the Department of Development and Socialisation within the Faculty of Social Sciences and from 1984-1989 was a member of the steering group responsible for setting up the degree course in Interdisciplinary Social Science.

Since the early 1990s his work has focused on health care, cultural differences and the situation of migrants and minority groups. He designed and implemented a programme on Intercultural Psychology within the psychology degree course at Utrecht and in 1999 was awarded a chair in Intercultural Psychology. From 1998 onwards he has been involved in developing the European MA course “Migration, mental health and social care”, initiated by Dr. Charles Watters of the University of Kent.

In 2002-2003 he collaborated with Dr. Watters on a multi-site research project for the European Commission (European Refugee Fund) entitled “Good practices in mental health and social care for refugees and asylum seekers”. He is a member of ERCOMER (European Research Centre on Migration and Ethnic Relations) and is leader of the group investigating migrant health in IMISCOE (EU Network of Excellence on International Migration, Integration and Social Cohesion).

His present interests are: the consequences of migration and internationalisation for psychology, psychiatry and other human sciences, adapting health and social care services to the needs of a multicultural population, refugees and asylum seekers and child development in different social and cultural settings.

Prof. Ingleby has published three books, including Forced Migration and Mental Health (2005) and Critical Psychiatry (1981/2004), as well as more than 130 articles, reports and book chapters. He has supervised 24 successful PhD’s and has a broad experience of both teaching and research.
Cas Mudde (April-May 2007)

Cas Mudde received his MA (1993) and PhD (1998) in Political Science from the University of Leiden (the Netherlands). Before joining the University of Antwerp in July 2002, he taught at the Central European University (Budapest, Hungary) in 1998-99, and at the University of Edinburgh (Great Britain) in 2000-2002. Since being at Antwerp, he has been a Fulbright EU Scholar-in-Residence at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey (New Brunswick, USA) in the first half of 2006 and Willy Brandt Guest Professor at the Malmö Institute for Studies of Migration, Diversity and Welfare (MIM) in Sweden in April-May 2007. He has further held short visiting positions at Academia Istropolitana Nova (Svätý Jur, Slovakia) in 1998, at Univerzita Karlova (Prague, Czech Republic) in 1999, at the University of California Santa Barbara (USA) in 2001, at University Jaume I (Castellón, Spain) in 2003 and at New York University (USA) in 2004.

Yasemin Soysal (academic year 2007/08)

Yasemin Soysal is Professor of Sociology at the University of Essex, U.K. Professor Soysal was previously John L. Loeb Associate Professor of Sociology and Faculty Associate of the Centre for European Studies and the Centre for International Affairs at Harvard University. She has been a German Marshall Fund Research Fellow, a National Academy of Education Spencer Fellow, a National Endowment of Humanities Research Fellow, a Jean Monnet Fellow, a Wissenschaftskolleg Fellow, visiting scholar at the Max Planck Institute, Berlin, and visiting professor at Juan March Institute, Madrid, New York University and Hitotsubashi University, Tokyo. She has also been a member of the editorial board of Ethnic and Racial Studies, and a member of The International Advisory Board of Ethnicities.

Much of Yasemin Soysal’s research and writing is related to the historical development and contemporary reconfigurations of the nation-state and citizenship in Europe, cultural and political implications of international migrations and international discourses and regimes of human rights. Her teaching includes courses on the nation-state, citizenship, collective identity, immigration, European integration and globalisation. She has served as the director of the MA programme in the Theory and Practice of Human Rights at the Human Rights Centre.

Professor Soysal’s books include Limits of Citizenship: Migrants and Postnational Membership in Europe (University of Chicago Press) and The Nation, Europe and the World: Textbooks and Curricula in Transition (edited with Hanna Schissler, Berghahn). She has had articles published in journals like American Sociological Review, Theory and Society, Sociology of Education, Ethnic and Racial Studies, and European Societies. Her latest research is on the post-war reconfigurations of nation-state identities as projected in secondary school history and civics textbooks (funded by the Economic and Social Research Council, with additional funds from the Leverhulme Trust and the British Academy).
Carlo Ruzza (autumn semester of 2008)

Professor Carlo Ruzza (MA SUNY, PhD Harvard) teaches migration studies and ethnic relations in the Sociology Department at Trento University in Italy. He has previously taught at the University of Essex and at the University of Surrey and was a Jean Monnet Fellow at the European Institute in Florence. His research interests focus on civil society, Europe and social movements, especially the peace movement, the environmental movement and ethno-nationalist movements and EU-level public-interest associations.

Carlo Ruzza has worked in several EU-funded projects on anti-discrimination, environmental sustainability, youth, health and education policy, as well as on a comparative study of migrant organisations and one on the role of organised civil society in ten EU countries.
Peggy Levitt (spring semester of 2009)

Professor Peggy Levitt is one of the most prominent scholars in research on migration and religion. She is Professor of Sociology at Wellesley College and a Research Fellow at The Weatherhead Center for International Affairs and The Hauser Center for Nonprofit Organizations at Harvard University, where she co-directs The Transnational Studies Initiative. She coordinates the Social Science Research Council working group on religion and globalisation and is Co-Principal Investigator for a National Science Foundation project about how global ideas about women’s rights are translated in local contexts. Peggy Levitt is also Co-Principal Investigator for a Metanexus Foundation study of spiritual capital and immigrant incorporation. She was a visiting professor at the University of Bologna and the University of Limerick in 2008.

Daniel Hiebert (academic year 2009/10)

Daniel Hiebert is Professor of Geography at the University of British Columbia and is a Co-Director of Metropolis British Columbia, a research centre dedicated to studying immigration and cultural diversity in Canada. His research focus is on the relationship between migration policy and urban change. He is interested in Canadian immigration from an international comparative perspective and collaborates with scholars in a number of countries (notably Australia, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Germany, and – due to the Willy Brandt Guest Professorship – Sweden). His empirical work looks mainly at the integration of immigrants in Canadian cities, particularly on issues related to their participation in housing and labour markets and their importance in the neighbourhood structure of the city. This research is based on a combination of methods and includes both statistical analyses and qualitative work.
Professor Hiebert plays an active role in the policy process, participates in the City of Vancouver’s Mayor’s Task Force on Immigration (and will co-chair the task force in 2010-2011) and on the Canada-BC Advisory Council on Immigration. His research is published in a series of Metropolis Working Papers and in academic journals like The Canadian Geographer, The Canadian Journal of Regional Science, Economic Geography, Planning Perspectives and Tijdschrift voor Economische en Sociale Geografie.

Raymond Taras (academic year 2010/11)

Raymond Taras is Professor of Political Science at Tulane University in New Orleans, Louisiana. He obtained his BA degree in his native Montréal, his MA and MPhil degrees in Sussex and Essex, and his PhD in Warsaw as a Canada Council Doctoral Fellow. His research in the field of Russian and East European Studies is combined with a special interest in literature. In 2002-08 he was Director of the World Literature Program at Tulane University.

In his academic career Professor Taras has served on the faculty of North American universities including Harvard, Stanford, Colorado Michigan, as well as European universities including Aalborg, Coventry, Warsaw and the European University Institute.

Professor Taras has had numerous articles and some twenty books published, including Liberal and illiberal nationalisms (Palgrave, 2002), Europe old and new: transnationalism, belonging, xenophobia (Rowman and Littlefield, 2008), Understanding ethnic conflict: the international dimension (with Rajat Ganguly; Longman, 2010) and the edited volume Russian identity in international relations: images, perceptions, misperceptions (Palgrave Macmillan, 2012). His most recent book projects have focused on the impact of immigration on European receiving societies. These include Islamophobia and Europe’s values, an edited volume on European multiculturalism and its failures, and a comparative study of the effects of anti-immigrant phobias on French, Polish and Swedish foreign policies.
Ayhan Kaya (autumn semester of 2011)

Ayhan Kaya is a Professor of Political Science and Jean Monnet Professor at the Department of International Relations at Istanbul Bilgi University in Turkey and he is also the Director of the European Institute at the same university. He is specialised on European identities, Euro-Turks in Germany, France, Belgium and the Netherlands, Circassian diaspora in Turkey, and the construction and articulation of modern transnational identities; received his PhD and MA degrees at the University of Warwick, England.

April); some of his other recent books are as follows, Contemporary Migrations in Turkey: Integration or Return (Istanbul Bilgi University Press, in Turkish, co-written with others), Belgian-Turks, Brussels: King Baudouin Foundation, 2008, co-written with Ferhat Kentel), Euro-Turks: A Bridge or a Breach between Turkey and the EU (Brussels: CEPS Publications, 2005, co-written with Ferhat Kentel, Turkish version by Bilgi University); wrote another book titled Sicher in Kreuzberg: Constructing Diasporas, published in two languages, English (Bielefeld: Transkript verlag, 2001) and Turkish (Istanbul: Büke Yayınları, 2000); translated Ethnic Groups and Boundaries by Fredrik Barth and Citizenship and Social Classes by T.H. Marshall and Tom Bottomore; and he edited several book on migration, integration, citizenship, and diasporas.

Professor Kaya received Turkish Social Science Association Prize in 2003; Turkish Academy of Sciences (TÜBA-GEPI) Prize in 2005; Sedat Simavi Research Prize in 2005; and also Euroactiv European Prize in 2008. He is recently engaged in two different FP7 projects called Modernities and Identities in Europe; and Pluralism and Social Cohesion in the EU, as well as another EU funded project called Social Impact of Emigration and Rural-Urban Migration in Central and Eastern Europe.

Professor Nina Glick Schiller, Honorary Doctorship

Professor Nina Glick Schiller has a long-standing relationship with researchers at Malmö University. She was a Willy Brandt Guest Professor in 2006 and has made repeated visits to Malmö. Her work has very high relevance for research carried out at the Faculty of Culture and Society and as a person and scholar she is highly esteemed among her Malmö colleagues.

Nina Glick Schiller is Director of the Cosmopolitan Cultures Institute and Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Manchester. She is an associate of the Max Planck Institute of Social Anthropology, Halle/Saale, and a senior associate of the Max Planck Institute for Ethnic and Religious Diversity in Göttingen. In her articles, chapters, reports and books, Nina Glick Schiller has developed a comparative and historical perspective on migration, transnational and diasporic processes, and social relations. Her current research interests include the relationships between migrants and cities, the transnationality of cities, diasporic cosmopolitanism and cosmopolitan sociability. Glick Schiller’s research has been conducted in Haiti, the United States and Germany, and she has worked with migrants from all regions of the globe. She is currently engaged in research projects in Manchester (UK) and Copenhagen (Denmark). She has also critiqued research paradigms and methodological nationalist orientations in migration, urban and health studies.

In migration and urban studies her concern has been to explore differences of power within transnational social fields in relation to the constitution of gender, race, class, status, poverty, the second generation, citizenship and national identity. She is the founding editor of the journal Identities: Global Studies in Culture and Power. Her recent book projects continue to develop migration theory by contesting the methodological nationalism in migration studies. They question the comparative framework that remains fixed in an analysis of individual nation-states and state policies. The book Locating Migration: Rescaling Migrants and Cities, co-edited with Ayse Caglar, examines the relationships between the scalar positioning of cities and the pathways of migrant transnationality. Migration, Development and Transnationalization: A Critical Stance, co-edited with Thomas Faist, questions the celebration of migrants as agents of development.
Nina Glick Schiller was appointed as Honorary Doctor at Malmo University at an Academic Ceremony held on 21 October 2011.

Hate crime in Skåne – causes, consequences and support initiatives
Hatbrott i Skåne – orsaker, konsekvenser och stödinsatser
Funding: Brottsoffermyndigheten (2011-2014)
Participants: Anders S. Wigerfelt, project leader (MIM/CTA), Berit Wigerfelt and Jenny Kiiskinen (MIM)

At a time when hate crime – especially in Skåne – and extremism as threats to the democratic society are growing, deepening our knowledge of the causes and consequences of hate crime and extremism is important. The aim is also to suggest measures for improving the situation in different ways for victims and to contribute to the knowledge of hate crime that will assist government agencies and organisations working with the problems of hate crime and political and religious extremism. Quantitative and qualitative methods are combined in order to explain the underlying causes and consequences of hate crime. The examination of the judicial system with regard to hate crime-related offences will result in the mapping and compilation of existing secondary empirical material in the form of public statistics relating to hate crime and register studies of report notifications and convictions in Skåne. Qualitative interviews with both the victims and perpetrators of hate crime will be conducted.
Integration of international marriages: Empirical evidence from Europe and North America (INTERMAR)

Funding: European Union 7th Framework Programme (2011-2013)
Participants: Pieter Bevelander (MIM) and researchers at The Danish National Centre for Social Research, Copenhagen

Increased international migration has brought the integration of immigrants to the forefront of sociopolitical topics in the EU and in North America. Although the economic and political aspects of immigrants’ integration have been scrutinised, little is known about immigrants’ social interactions with the native population. Interethnic marriages have been posited as a factor that undermines racial barriers and, thus, contributes to the integration between immigrants and natives.

Measuring the influence of ethnic background, family networks and local business and public regulatory environments on self-employment in different economic sectors in Sweden – a multi-level analysis using register data

Funding: Region Skåne and Befolkningsekonomiska stiftelsen (BEST) (2011-2013)
Participants: Per Broomé, project leader, Pieter Bevelander (MIM) and Henrik Ohlsson (Social Epidemiology and Health Economics, Lund University)

Current theoretical models suggest that self-employment among immigrants is the result of a combination of multiple situational, cultural and institutional factors. The individual operates in a number of different contexts, such as the ethnic context and the family context as well as within a local business and public regulatory environment – all of which can be of importance for understanding the rationale for self-employment. However, studies have so far been unable to quantify the relevance of these contexts for self-employment. The objective of this project is therefore to quantify the effect of the aforementioned contexts on the individual propensity for self-employment among natives and immigrants in Sweden. Preliminary results suggest that the ethnic context might be of minor importance for understanding self-employment.

Study on typology and policy responses to child begging in the EU

Funding: European Commission, DG Home Affairs (January 2011-March 2012)
Project code: JLS/2009/ISEC/PR/008-F2
Participants: Brigitte Suter and Emma Söderman (MIM), Veronika Bilger, project leader (International Centre for Migration Policy Development – ICMPD, Vienna), ECORYS Nederland BV, ECPAT Austria, Save the Children Europe Group, Salvati Copiii (Save the Children Romania), Save the Children Denmark, Save the Children Italy, Terres des hommes

The aim of the study is to provide the necessary knowledge to support Commission policy making. The study should provide insight into the different typology of situations involving child begging in a representative sample of EU Member States, as well as in some non-EU countries, and provide information about the prevalence of this phenomenon. It will analyse to what extent the different situations fall into categories regulated in different international instruments and standards and assess the national responses to different forms of child begging, including legislation and policy. On this basis, it should identify best practices and produce policy recommendations in the best interest of the child for EU action and national measures.

Mångfaldsbarometern – en studie av svenskarnas och invandrarnas attityder

The Diversity Barometer – a study of the attitudes of Swedes and immigrants
Funding: MIM, Malmö University, Institute of Sociology, Uppsala University and CEIFO, Stockholm University (2011-2012)
Participants: Björn Fryklund and Pieter Bevelander (MIM), Charles Westin (Stockholm University), Irving Palm and Orlando Mella, project leader (Uppsala University)

The results of the Diversity Barometer and other investigations show that the approach to ethnic diversity remains positive. However, extremely negative attitudes can also be noted, where the most negative are perceived to be in relation to Islam and Muslims. The dimension work points to more positive results than the other dimensions, where the most negative appears in connection with religion. In this project the religious dimension is widened and analyses relating to ideas about Islam acquire a more prominent place. The aim of the project is threefold: 1) to analyse opinion changes concerning immigration with the aid of follow-up longitudinal studies, 2) to analyse opinion changes relating to diversity, also with the aid of follow-up longitudinal studies and 3) to examine the attitudes of people with non-European backgrounds toward Swedish society and the process of integration. The first two studies will be based on postal questionnaires sent to a representative selection of the Swedish population, while the latter will be based on structured interview questionnaires directed at people originating from non-European countries.

Establishing transnational economic networks and lifestyles: Migration and trade between Turkey and Sub-Saharan Africa

Funding: in the frames of PhD positions, article-project (Autumn 2011)
Participants: Brigitte Suter (MIM) and Ted Baird (Roskilde University)

Since 2003 Africa has appeared more intensely in Turkish foreign and economic policy, with 2005 being dubbed as “the Year of Africa”. In the shadow of Turkey’s political and economic re-discovery of Africa is the emergence of transnational economic networks of informal African traders. African nationals arrive in Turkey for many different reasons – studies, business, asylum, transit to the EU, or informal work or trade – and over the past 10 years the number of arrivals from African countries has more than doubled. Istanbul serves as a hub for a very diverse migrant population and witnesses the growing number – although still minimal compared to other nationalities – of Sub-Saharan African social and economic networks, both locally and transnationally. Drawing on ethnographic fieldwork over several months among African migrants in Istanbul, this article explores migration and trade patterns between African countries and Turkey and seeks to understand the economic and social trajectories of establishment among African migrants. (Drafts were presented at a MIM research seminar in October 2011, and at the “Integration and Immigrants’ Participation” conference in Reykjavik in November 2011.)
Regulating intimate lives – consequences of changes in Danish family migration rule

Funding: Danish Research Council (2010-2012)
Participants: Pieter Bevelander (MIM) and researchers at The Danish National Centre for Social Research, Copenhagen

The main research questions for this project are: How are marriage patterns in immigrant families reproduced or changed over time, and how might this development be affected by the specific nation state context? Denmark presents an internationally unprecedented opportunity to investigate this topic. This is due to a legal reform that, since 2002, has explicitly sought to alter immigrant marriage patterns by prohibiting, for example, marriage migration for spouses in couples where any spouse is under 24 years of age. The first sub-project, Can marriage behaviour be regulated? uses register data and statistical methods to analyse how the marriage behaviour and emigration behaviour of immigrant youths has been affected by the 2002 reform. The second sub-project, Dynamics of change in immigrant families’ marriage decision-making, investigates how the changed legislation has affected family authority structures. The third sub-project, Gender, legislation, and spousal choice, investigates differences in men’s and women’s adaptation to the changed legal context. The fourth sub-project, Geography, mobility and marriage strategies, focuses on couples who, in spite of the reform, marry spouses from abroad and subsequently move to Sweden. The study combines Danish and Swedish quantitative data with in-depth interviews with immigrants settled in Sweden.

HELMI – Health, migration and integration.
A pilot study of interventions targeted at Somali and Thai women in Sweden

Funding: Integrationsfonden (2010-2012)
Project code: IF-2010-0002

Participants: Therese Holmkvist, project leader, Björn Fryklund, Susanne Sundell-Lecerof, Inge Dahlstedt, Eva Flodström, Achraf Daryani, Cecilia Fernbrant (MIM), in collaboration with Lund University, Uppsala University, and several Swedish municipalities

Previous studies have shown that many migrant groups have poorer health than the native Swedish population. Poor health is strongly associated with poor labour market integration and social participation, which in turn often lead to marginalisation. This pilot study is conducted on Somali and Thai women participating in targeted resettlement activities and Swedish language classes for foreigners in Västra Götaland. The purpose of the study is to evaluate these activities with the aim of investigating the health status and health needs of Somali and Thai women, developing culturally sensitive evaluation methods and generating recommendations for future interventions and for the methodological development of existing interventions. Methods include focus group discussions with the women taking part in the activities and a pilot questionnaire in Somali and Thai, which will be distributed to both exposed and unexposed women. The starting point of the pilot study is to empower the target group. All the activities in the project will be developed and carried out in close collaboration with the target group. This pilot project will lay the foundations for a future and larger intervention project, which is planned to be carried out in several municipalities in Sweden.

Building a network for studies of self-employment and entrepreneurship in Sweden

Funding: Region Skåne (2010)
Participants: Per Broomé, project leader, Pieter Bevelander and Tobias Schölin (MIM)

In 2010 Per Broomé initiated a project on self-employment together with researchers from MIM, Lund University School of Economics and Management, Herbert Felix Institute, Eslöv Municipality, and the Centre for Research in Ethnic Minority Entrepreneurship at De Montfort University in the UK. The collective project idea dissolved into a couple of separate projects which are now conducted in the different institutions and a network for cooperation.

Nordic populism - changes over time and space. A comparative and retrospective analysis of populist parties in the Nordic countries from 1965-2012

Funding: MIM (2010)
Participants: Björn Fryklund, project leader (MIM) and Jenny Kiiskinen (GPS/MIM)

The Dansk Folkeparti (The Danish People’s Party) in Denmark, Fremskrittspartiet (The Progress Party) in Norway, Sannfinländarna (The True Finns) in Finland and Sverigedemokraterna (The Sweden Democrats) in Sweden are all examples of radical right-wing populist parties that, to varying degrees, have had electoral victories in the Nordic countries in the last decade. The aim of the project is to understand and explain today’s populist parties from a comparative Nordic perspective by retrospectively analysing what these parties were like in the past and how they have changed. Analysing this development is a key to understanding why Sweden is now becoming like other Nordic countries and large parts of Europe. It facilitates an understanding of which political, social and economic factors obstruct or support the development of populist parties. Understanding this development by adopting an overall perspective of the political, social and economic changes that have taken place in the Nordic countries over a period of almost five decades makes the study both unique and important.
Labour market integration of refugees in Sweden and Canada

Funding: NORFACE (2009-2013), part of the TEMPO project
Participants: Pieter Bevelander (MIM) and international participants

The project examines the assimilation patterns of non-economic migrants – an area in which our understanding is limited. The labour market outcomes of non-economic migrants in Sweden, a country in which refugees represent about 40 per cent of those granted permanent residence, are compared to those in Canada. In particular, the patterns of labour market integration for different groups of resettled refugees are compared to those of other humanitarian immigrants who came as asylum seekers. Special attention is given to settlement patterns. While resettled refugees are often relocated in the northern part of Sweden, and thus in smaller communities far from major cities, in Canada the vast majority of immigrants gravitate toward the large urban centres, despite efforts to encourage immigration to smaller towns.

Scandinavia’s population groups originating from developing countries: change and integration

Funding: Nordic Council (2009-2012)
Participants: Pieter Bevelander, project leader, and Inge Dahlstedt (MIM), in collaboration with researchers from Denmark, Norway and Switzerland

The project documents how the groups in question emerged and developed over time by focusing on their increase due to various growth components such as immigration and births, changes in their age-sex structure and shifts in their composition by selected traits, e.g. immigrants versus descendants. The project focuses on three aspects of the integration of these groups - the adaptation of demographic behaviour, incorporation into the educational system and integration in the labour market. These different facets of population dynamics and integration are considered when pursuing insights into the effects of policies.
and practices. This comparative, cooperative, multidisciplinary, policy-relevant project – the first of its kind for a group of countries – will compare the population groups in Denmark, Norway and Sweden, contrast the various groups with the native population in each country and compare the groups of the same national origins across the host countries.

Pathways to citizenship

Vägar till medborgarskap

Funding: in the frames of the positions at MIM (2009-2011)

Participants: Christian Fernández, Anders Hellström and Pieter Bevelander (MIM)

This joint book project has brought together researchers affiliated to MIM with an interest in the concept of citizenship. It primarily concerns pathways to, and from, citizenship in a Swedish context, but also deals with issues that theoretically and empirically correspond to wider discussions about culture, security, integration and migration.

Promoting sustainable integration policies (PROSINT)

Funding: European Commission, DG JLS (European Integration Fund)

(December 2009 – June 2011)

Project code: JLS/2008/EIFX/CA/1039

Participants: Brigitte Suter (MIM), Elisabeth Strasser, project leader (International Centre for Migration Policy Development (ICMPD), Vienna), Multicultural Centre Prague (CZ), European Forum for Migration Studies (efms) (DE), International and European Forum of Migration Research (IT), Erasmus University Rotterdam and School of Management and Governance, Social Risks and Safety Studies, University of Twente (NL), University of Barcelona (ES), Social Policy Research Centre, University of Middlesex (GB), Department of Politics, University of Sheffield (GB)

The overall project focus has been on the link between admission requirements in migration policies and integration policies. The main research question was: How do admission policies affect integration trajectories of Third Country Nationals
(TCN) in selected European countries? In this sense, the PROSINT project investigated the impact of admission policies – and in particular the integration conditions that are part of admission policies – on the integration of newcomers.

The best interests of the child in Nordic asylum processes

Barnets bästa i nordiska asylprocesser

_Funding:_ Åbo Akademi, Eugen Schulmans stiftelse (2009)

_Participant:_ Anna Lundberg (MIM)

The project researches the implementation of the principle of the Best Interests of the Child (Article three in the Convention on the Rights of the Child) in Nordic asylum processes. The project’s empirical material consists of decisions in asylum cases regarding families, as well as policy documents in the Nordic countries.

Nordic research network for the media, migration and society

_Participant:_ Peter Hervik (MIM)

The Migra-Nord network gathers more than 60 junior and senior academics working in the interdisciplinary field of the media, migration and ethnic relations in the Nordic countries, particularly in Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland. It also aims to include researchers from the Baltic countries. Due to the novelty of the research field there is no institutional setting focusing specifically on the media and migration. Therefore, the participants are individual researchers working in various departments, research centres and faculties in the social sciences and humanities. The network has a board of national coordinators from each country and is directed by Dr. Karina Horsti at CEREN, University of Helsinki, Finland. Seminars and meetings were held at MIM in spring 2009 and were co-organised by Rikke Andreassen (Malmlö University) and Randi Marselis (University of Southern Denmark).

Health care in NowHereLand – Improving services for undocumented migrants in the EU

Project code: GA 2006/333
Participant: Carin Björngren Cuadra (Faculty of Health and Society, Malmö University)

Access to health care is a fundamental human right and especially important for socially disadvantaged and vulnerable people. Although the EU member states do acknowledge the right for health care for everybody, undocumented migrants (UDM) face considerable barriers in accessing services. The health of undocumented migrants is at great risk due to difficult living and working conditions often characterised by uncertainty, exploitation and dependency. Health care organisations and professionals find themselves in a paradox situation: if they give care they will probably go against the legal and financial regulations, but if they don’t give care they violate human rights and exclude the most vulnerable. NGOs play an important role in taking over the management of this paradox by providing resources and bridging the gap between policy frameworks and people’s needs.

Fostering citizens?
Schools, values and the liberal state’s dilemma

Fostran i medborgarskap? Skola, värdegrund och den liberala statens dilemma
Funding: Forskningsrådet för arbetsliv and socialvetenskap, FAS (2008+)
Participants: Christian Fernández (MIM), Mats Sjölin, project leader (Department of Social Sciences, Linnaeus University), Mikael Sundström (Department of Political Science, Lund University)

This research project explores the role of the liberal state in fostering citizens through the common school system. Inherent in this role is a normative dilemma that is especially prevalent in diverse societies. On the one hand, the state has a responsibility for its young members and their development into fully grown and responsible citizens. Nowhere is this responsibility as obvious as in public schooling. Not only are schools supposed to give children a formal education in mathematics, orthography and other subjects, they are also expected to prepare children for adult life by shaping them into good, responsible and democratic citizens. On the other hand, the modern Western democratic state is embedded in a liberal cluster of ideas that imposes certain norms and limitations on the state. Central among these is the norm of neutrality, according to which the state should have nothing to do with the personal values, lifestyles and moral beliefs of its citizenry. From this liberal perspective, then, the state should have no influence over the moral upbringing of its citizens. The dilemma explored by the research project lies at the intersection between these two conflicting values of education for citizenship and state neutrality. The project combines a politico-theoretical approach with empirical and comparative analyses of Sweden, Canada, England and France.

Together and apart:
Cultural diversity and the statecraft of toleration

Funding: Vetenskapsrådet (The Swedish Research Council) (2008+)
Project code: 2008-23370-58081-27
Participant: Christian Fernández, MIM, Malmö University

How should the tolerant state accommodate cultural diversity? What are the reasons for this and what are the limitations? These questions have a long history in political theory and science. This project scrutinises and compares the different ends and means of toleration in pluralist states. Drawing on examples across time and space, it seeks to show how, in very different ways, states and empires have succeeded in the “statecraft” of toleration. In particular, I try to show how the statecraft of toleration can be conceptualised and analysed as the art of living both together and apart; together as the citizens of a society and apart as individuals/groups with private beliefs and identities. The purpose of the project is to deepen our understanding of toleration as a necessary, imperfect and multifaceted value in diverse societies.

Entrepreneurs in Skåne – the mapping and analysis of native and non-native entrepreneurs

Företagare i Skåne – kartläggning och analys av inrikes och utrikes födda företagare

Funding: Region Skåne and seven municipalities in Skåne (2008-2009)

Participants: Per Broomé, project leader, Pieter Bevelander, Inge, Dahlstedt, Tobias Schölin (MIM)

In 2008 and 2009 we were engaged in a research project on self-employment in the Region of Skåne. The aim was to study the connection between self-employment and economic growth with a special focus on the importance of the ethnic background (measured by country of birth) of the self-employed. The project resulted in the report, Företagare i Skåne – kartläggning och analys av inrikes och utrikes födda företagare Region Skåne, Malmö (2009).

Labour market integration of resettled refugees in Sweden

Funded by European Refugee Fund (2008-2009)

Participants: Pieter Bevelander, project leader, Mirjam Hagström, Maja Povrzanović Frykman, Sofia Rönnqvist (MIM)

The objective of the project was to find out more about resettled refugees’ labour market integration in Sweden in order to increase the knowledge needed for a more effective reception policy of resettled refugees, as well as contribute to the development of a common European migration policy that would lead to a better labour- and housing integration of refugees. The patterns of labour market integration for different groups of resettled refugees were studied and compared with patterns characteristic for other humanitarian immigrants coming to Sweden as asylum seekers. Settlement was found to constitute a significant difference between the groups. Resettled refugees are often settled in the northern part of Sweden, usually in smaller communities far away from major cities, in order to avoid concentration in certain municipalities. The advantage of this is that such communities can specialise in the provision of a good and appropriate reception. At the same time, the labour market is often worse in these municipalities. Based on the results of quantitative studies, qualitative case studies were conducted that provided a better understanding of the quantitative data.

The political integration of natives, minorities and immigrants

Funding: in the frames of the Willy Brandt Fellowship, MIM (2008+)

Participants: Pieter Bevelander, Professor, project leader (MIM) and Ravi Pendakur (University of Ottawa)

This research project aims at a better understanding of the political representation and participation of immigrants and ethnic minorities relative to natives and focuses on the selected EU countries of Sweden, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom in comparison to Canada. The selection of these countries is partly based on the different political and economic systems, immigration histories and data availability in these four countries. The political systems of the UK/Canada and the Netherlands/Sweden are somewhat similar, as are the migration histories of the Netherlands/UK. In economic respects the Netherlands/Sweden and the UK/Canada are more comparable. Moreover, a major advantage is that for all these countries quantitative data relating to representation and voting participation by immigrants and ethnic minorities is available. For Sweden and the Netherlands it is also possible to study the representation and participation of non-nationals.

The struggle for the people: neo-nationalism in Scandinavia

Kampern om folket: den skandinaviska nynationalismen

Funding: in the frames of the Postdoc position (2008-2012)

Participant: Anders Hellström (MIM)

This project aims to explain the appearance and development of three nationalist parties by scrutinising and comparing people’s changing perceptions in three Scandinavian countries. The main thesis is that the nationalist parties in Sweden, Denmark and Norway gain resonance for their politics by acting as the true heirs of Social Democracy – i.e. the proponents of the people. From this perspective, it is relevant to also consider the Social Democratic parties’ perceptions of people over time. This project aims to explain why nationalist parties emerge and develop differently in the Scandinavian countries and why reactions to these parties differ in the three countries. By way of extrapolation, the ambition is to illuminate the differences and similarities in the contemporary debate on national self images (and threat images), integration and immigration in the Scandinavian countries.

Participants: Katarina Löthberg, project leader, Björn Fryklund (MIM), Susanne Sundell Lecerof, Cecilia Fernbrant (Lund University), Achraf Daryani, Eva Flodström (Uppsala University)

IMHAd studies the impact of International Health Advisors’ (IHA) work. Respondents are newly settled Iraqis in municipalities with and without access to IHA. IMHAd undertakes a) a prospective longitudinal cohort study in the form of a survey on the effects on physical and mental health, lifestyle factors and health care utilisation, b) a health economic evaluation of the effect on health-related quality of life of the IHA, c) a qualitative study on the respondents’ experiences of sexual and reproductive health and rights and of the IHA, d) method development with the aim of creating the fundament for a national, quality-assured IHA concept.

Promoting Comparative Quantitative Research in the Field of Migration and Integration in Europe (PRoMINSTAT)

Funding: European Union (2007-2010)

Participants: Pieter Bevelander and Mirjam Hagström (MIM), international participants

With the Amsterdam Treaty and the increasing competence of the European Union in the field of migration, integration, anti-discrimination and asylum, the need for comparative data in this area has been increasingly recognised. Social scientists, on the other hand, have a much broader agenda for comparative research, which goes beyond the immediate needs of policy makers and requires much more sophisticated data as well as knowledge about datasets that can be used for comparative research purposes. The main objective of PRoMINSTAT was to promote comparative quantitative research in the field of migration and integration by 1) establishing an online database containing essential technical information about statistical datasets in 27 European countries (all EU Member States plus Norway and Switzerland) as well as the variables included in these datasets, 2) a systematic description of national data collection systems in brief country reports, 3) thematic studies to explore the possibilities for and the limitations of conducting comparative research in a number of different thematic areas in the broad field of migration and integration of migrants. A separate study investigated the links between the data needs of policymakers, data provision and data collection policies. The thematic studies were conducted in the second half of the project (months 15-24).

The MIGHEALTHNET project aimed to stimulate the exchange of knowledge on migrant and minority health through the development of interactive data bases in each of the participating countries. These ‘wikis’ contain the following sorts of data: Background information concerning migrant and minority populations; The state of health of migrants and minorities; The health care system and the entitlement of migrants and minorities to health care; Accessibility of health care; Quality of care: ‘good practices’ developed to improve the matching of service provisions to the needs of migrants and minorities; Achieving change: centres of expertise, general reports and policy documents, journals, training programmes, E-mail groups etc. By facilitating the transfer of knowledge and expertise and stimulating network formation within and between European countries, the project contributed to the development of good practices concerned with the health of migrants and minorities.

The best interest of the child in the Swedish asylum process

Barnets bästa i den svenska asylprocessen – från ord till handling

Participan: Anna Lundberg (MIM/GPS)

The project “The Best Interests of the Child – from Words to Deeds” (2006-2008) aimed to highlight how the Principle of the Best Interests of the Child (UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, Article 3) is implemented in the Swedish asylum process. The aim was to describe the process in which the Principle of the Best Interests of the Child is applied by employees in the administrative process at the Migration Board when asylum applications regarding children and their parents are dealt with. The empirical data consisted of policy documents, interviews (with 45 handling officers) and asylum decisions (104 children’s decisions) regarding asylum seeking children and their parents. The causes of the discrepancies between words and action take shape at a variety of levels: at the individual level when the personnel at the Migration Board implement and use the Principle of the Best Interests of the Child, at an organisational level, for example when the best interest of the child is implemented through educational activities and guiding principles and at a more comprehensive social level, when norms regarding what is regarded as ”best for the children”, especially foreign children, take shape in society. Norms regarding children as vulnerable and children as right holders, as well as the principle of a strict migration policy, are of relevance when understanding what happens when the best interests of the child are put into effect at the Migration Board.

African migrants’ experiences of transit: The case of Istanbul – PhD research

Funding: Willy Brandt Guest Professorship-financed PhD candidate position (October 2006 - October 2012)

Participant: Brigitte Suter (MIM), supervised by Maja Povranović Frykman and Björn Fryklund

Migration from Africa to Europe is seldom a simple and straightforward journey; instead the route often goes through so-called transit countries. Transit is the state of being in-between, of starting out but not yet arriving; it is a state of insecurity and impermanence. This research project investigates the notion of transit in the process of migration in general, and the impact on social networks in particular. Furthermore, the project sheds light on specific circumstances within the transit space of Istanbul, leading up to a life in transit. Data was collected between 2007 and 2009 by ethnographic methods among Sub-Saharan African migrants in Istanbul.

Attitudes towards interracial marriage – PhD research

Funding: Malmö University (PhD candidate position) (2007-2011)

Participant: Sayaka Osanami Törngren (IMER/MIM), supervised by Björn Fryklund

This dissertation focuses on the geographical area of Malmö, the third largest city in Sweden, and examines the majority society’s opinions and attitudes toward interracial dating, marriage and childbearing. The dissertation is driven by two theoretical frames: the theory of race as ideas constructed through the perception of visible differences and the theory of prejudice and stereotypes. Mixed methods have been chosen as a means of exploring people’s attitudes toward interracial relationships. Quantitative data was collected by means of an attitude survey and the qualitative data was collected by means of follow-up interviews with some of the respondents who participated in the survey. The study shows that although their attitudes vary depending on the different groups in question, the majority of the respondents and interviewees could imagine getting involved in interrelationships and would not react negatively if a family member got involved in such a relationship. The quantitative results address the importance of intimate contacts, in other words having friends of diverse racial and ethnic backgrounds in having more positive attitudes toward interracial dating, marriage and childbearing. Age, gender, education and the place of upbringing also affects people’s attitudes. The qualitative inquiry probes the reasoning behind the survey results and points to the complicated relations between individual attitudes and the sense of group position. The interviewees’ words depict colour-blind ways of talking about attitudes toward interracial marriage and different groups. Ideas of race emerge in this colour-blind reasoning and the role of visible difference is highlighted both through the quantitative and qualitative inquiries.

Participant: Peter Hervik (MIM)

This was an international media research project that originated in the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Tampere and was based on a grant from the Helsingin Sanomat Research Foundation. The project continues with individual travel funds for researchers by the home institutions and an additional Norwegian grant from the University of Oslo. This project is team based and involves researchers from 15 countries, who have met three times in Finland and twice elsewhere. The project looks at the media coverage in January to March 2006 in Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, the UK, Germany, France, Israel, Egypt, Pakistan, China, Russia, Canada, USA and Argentina.
Questioning the European ‘crisis of multiculturalism’

Funding: MIM grant
Participants: Peter Hervik (MIM), Alana Lentin, coordinator (University of Sussex) and Gavan Titley (National University of Ireland, Maynooth)

A research initiating seminar and proposed research project aiming to examine the development and dynamics of the contemporary European ‘crisis of multiculturalism’. The idea that multiculturalism is in crisis is a predominant feature of the post-9/11 world and has become a pronounced aspect of public debate in a host of western European nation-states. Despite the prevailing narrative, this crisis did not start with the attacks on New York and Washington. Lived multiculture in twentieth century – and particularly postcolonial – Europe has posed a problem since being conceptually framed within philosophies and practices of multiculturalism. The idea that people of diverse “origins” could live together within a national (or global) space without having to assimilate the dominant cultural and social values conflicts with both humanist universalism and white European mythologies of superiority.

Cartoon Violence? Media, Muslims and the making of a global controversy; Islamization of the cultural sphere? Critical perspectives on Islam and performing arts in Western Europe and the Middle East

Funding: MIM grant
Participant: Peter Hervik (MIM)

Participation in research network including a European Science Foundation Explorative Workshop, 23-24 October 2008, Amsterdam, the Netherlands.

Research and book project. This book explores the Muhammad cartoon controversy as a case study in globalisation. The authors of this volume look at the series of events as both globally connected and locally adapted. By examining how the cartoons and stories about them were reproduced, circulated and appropriated in a series of different and to some extent sequential cultural contexts for very different purposes, the authors draw conclusions about how processes of global circulation and local appropriation actually happen. The questions raised in this book include: What is the relation between the global flow of images and local contexts of protest and violence? To what extent is it meaningful to call these transnational flows of images and stories “global”? What role does the media play in local and transnational representations of Islam, Muslims, Denmark, the West and other global constructs? What roles, if any, can anthropology play in addressing media representations of people and events like these?

BOOKS

Willy Brandt Conference Proceedings
The Willy Brandt Conference Proceedings are based on the conferences organised under the auspices of the Willy Brandt Guest Professorship’s Chair. As the books are available both in print and online, the transparency and public character of the Guest Professorship in IMER in Memory of Willy Brandt is confirmed and the free distribution of scientific results ensured.

Other books

The Series makes the original manuscripts by the Willy Brandt Guest Professors widely available and was established with a view to contributing to the wider and more permanent influence of the presence of Willy Brandt Guest Professors in migration-related research work in Sweden.

Editors: Christian Fernández and Anders Hellström

The MIM Working Papers Series is designed to communicate work in progress that has not been published elsewhere and to disseminate key findings in areas related to the core research themes of MIM. In this area, the series welcomes contributions from various disciplines, different theoretical perspectives and both quantitatively and qualitatively oriented research. The series includes contributions from MIM staff, affiliated researchers at Malmö University and invited authors (who for instance have presented their work at the MIM seminars). The papers are published in Swedish or in English.

MIM Working Papers are only available online and the authors hold exclusive copyright to their work. Readers are invited to discuss the papers in a special commentator field. The views expressed in the MIM Working Papers are those of the independent authors.
